Success Coaching: A Holistic Approach For At-Risk Students

Tuesday, December 11 ~ 3:00-4:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

We all have at-risk students on our campus, right? And, we all want them to succeed, but how do we get there? Success for this population is largely dependent on the right mix of ingredients – planning, teamwork, engagement, connection, and mentoring being a few key components. Student success coaching has gained recent popularity and can be a powerful tool for campuses looking to connect with their at-risk student population. With significant focus on the success coaching relationship, colleges are seeing positive spikes in performance, increased connection with faculty and staff, and greater participation in campus and community activities.

In this webinar, we will demonstrate how to create environments conducive to success for at-risk students. By focusing on the structure and strengths of the student success coaching team (recruitment & training), along with the effects of key components of a student success coaching model (system) for this population of students, we will share successful, data-based engagement and retention strategies. We will also discuss dynamics of the success coaching playbook, success coaching techniques, student classification levels, building student accountability and ownership, internal and external engagement, and collaborative use of campus activities and resources. Participants will learn how to measure and increase institutional readiness and capacity, as well as how to effectively engage at-risk students in the campus climate. Many of the strategies presented can be used to develop comprehensive engagement and mentoring programs for at-risk students that can improve retention and graduation rates.

Objectives:

- Realize the importance of structuring the student success coaching team
- Identify how to effectively utilize a student success coaching playbook
- Understanding the importance and value of “holistic” student success coaching for at-risk students
